MARK L. HATCHER, CLERK
OF THE BANKRUPTCY COURT

Case No16-11767-CMA

I am filing my adamite objection to the disbursement of fees to attorney, accountants, and the trustee before the original creditors are reimbursed.

As a retired carpenter with zero legal experience, I believe that I could have hired two professional forensic accountants, and would have the FBI immediately seize all assets of Ross Hanson and girl friend. All assets after a full accounting would have been divided on a percentage basis and would had have been paid out more than two years ago.

I regretfully observe the system to be broken. Is it any wonder the average citizen expresses such little trust in lawyers. In closing, I would question just to whom our bankruptcy laws were designed to protect? Once again, as a retired carpenter, I have a great suspicion the bankruptcy laws have been modified (by lawyers) to completely screw the creditors (such as myself), and enrich the lawyers themselves.

Sincerely,

David L. Sorensen
